Monthly Report - January 2026

Market Commentary and Outlook

The global economy is forecast to expand this year and in 2026 at close to its long-term trend rate, according to the latest estimates provided by the International Monetary Fund (IMF), with growth forecast to be 3.3% in 2026 and 3.2% in 2027. The IMF notes the 'balancing of divergent forces' with 'headwinds from shifting trade policies' being 'offset by tailwinds from surging investment related to technology, including artificial intelligence (AI), more so in North America and Asia than in other regions, as well as fiscal and monetary support, broadly accommodative financial conditions, and adaptability of the private sector'. Growth in advanced economies is forecast to be 1.8% in 2026, above the estimate for 2025, but with risks remaining 'tilted to the downside'.

The broad US stock market (S&P 500 Accumulation Index) has been on an uptrend since early April 2025, gaining 1.5% in January. The Australian market (ASX 200 Accumulation Index) gained 1.8% over the month. The Australian dollar gained 4.3% relative to the US dollar in the same period. Commodity prices were mixed with lithium, copper, gold and oil posting gains, while natural gas and iron ore declined.

Key global share markets have been 'pricing-in' a shift by central banks towards less restrictive monetary policy, despite signs of inflation rising again in some economies. However, share markets are likely to remain volatile given current ongoing geopolitical tensions.

Fund Commentary

The Fund gained by 1.6% in January, which underperformed the index return of 3.6%. For the 12 months up to the end of January, the Fund returned 17.7%.

The MSCI Emerging Markets index gained 3.6% in January, outperforming the developed markets index, which declined by 2.8% (both in Australian dollar terms, unhedged).

Korea (+24.0%), Brazil (+12.6%) and Taiwan (+10.7%) were three of the best performing emerging markets during the month.

Emerging markets have lagged developed markets for some time, partly due to the strong performance of the 'Magnificent Seven' US mega-cap technology stocks that comprise a significant part of the developed world index. Despite rising strongly in 2025, the emerging markets sector remains attractive in terms of historical valuations.
